Reclaiming the Sahara.

New developments are being made in the Sahara as well as in American deserts, but a comparison shows striking contrasts. In the region of Djerid and the lake of Kharsa—a district with a population of some 30,000-the French government has recently plated 650,000 date trees. Within this planted region, which is surrounded by a palisade made of the ends of young branches of the date trees, the culture of the date palm and of the olive tree is carried on upon an extensive scale. Some 16,000 tons of dates are produced, 5,000 of which are consumed within the country. The leaves of the palm are used in hat and basket-making. From the sap a popular native drink is evolved. More than 8,000 tons of olive oil in 1898 were exported. The oil manufactories rival the best establishments of Provence, Italy, and Spain. In addition to the date and olive culture, fruits are raised in abundance for the Algerian market-bananas, oranges, pomegranates, grapes, lemons, apricots and peaches. There is also an important trade in silk tissues and mixtures. The Phosphate company of Gafsa has constructed 150 miles of railway, with five large bridges, and has taken more than 200,000 tons of phosphates from the soil. MALARIA Invisible Means bad air, and whether it Enemy to Health comes from the low lands and marshes of the country, or the filthy sewers and drain pipes of the cities and towns, its effect upon the human system is the same.

These atmospheric poisons are breathed into the lungs and taken up by the blood, and the foundation of some long, debilitating illness is laid. Chills and fever, chronic dyspepsia, torpid and enlarged liver, kidney troubles, jaundice and biliousness are frequently due to that invisible foe, Malaria. Noxious gases and unhealthy matter collect in the system because the liver and kidneys fail to act, and are poured into the blood current until it becomes so polluted and sluggish that the poisons literally break through the skin, and carbuncles, boils, abscesses, ulcers and various eruptions of an indolent character appear, depleting the system, and threatening life itself.
